Drill free dentistry is a innovative oral health improvement that currently lets us to supply painfree oral health care for our nervous patients. This means that every one of the advantages that were being accessible with the dental drill can currently be accomplished by a innovative system known as air abrasion.

Tasks like taking out decay in preparation of dental treatments is considered far gentler when being executed via air abrasion. This technique makes use of very small abrasive particles being thrust by powerful streams of air to help remove dental decay from teeth while stopping the corrosion from spreading any more.

Once any caries have been removed and the tooth has been correctly prepped, your dentist may fill the affected site with a dental filling. Oral health doctors could apply a sealant, or use a ceramic or synthetic resin tooth coloured filling on the front surface of the tooth.
